

NEW PUMP SITE IS NO BETTER THAN THE OLD ONE

Pumps at Fremont, Same as the Newark Pumps, Failed in Their Efficiency According to Testimony Given

Engineer Sherman on the Stand Wednesday and Thursday Said He Did Not Wish to Qualify as an Expert Mechanical Engineer.

Mr. Sherman in his examination Wednesday afternoon, made a reference to Mr. Smith, who was present at the examination, and Mr. Smith asked for a red pencil with which to change the plans which were brought from another room by W. C. Christian. These plans were blue prints, and related to the completed pumping station, under the plans as revised by R. H. Sherman, from the plans drawn by L. K. Davis.

Mr. Sherman further said: "The amount of concrete work under the Davis plans, and those made by us was practically the same. The structural and ornamental iron work at the pumping station was about $3,000 more under our plans than under those made by L. K. Davis.

"The difference in the amount to have completed the building at the site contemplated by our plans and those of the Davis contract would have been over $1,100.

"I think that the advisability of the intake from the river at either site would have been about the same.

"I think that the relative pollution of the water there was the same, at either site would have been the same.

"For a water works site, I don't believe that the new site was any better than the old."

"I don't believe that the new site was any better than the old," and went to the board of public service and broached the matter of changing the capacity of the pumps from a 3,000,000 gallon to a 5,000,000. "We thought that it was to be the people's plant, and that the water consumption would increase, as Newark was a growing city and we thought that the 3,000,000 pump, when doing its best, was not sufficient for the city, taking into consideration the probable growth of the city for 20 years, from the time the pumps were to be installed.

"I don't remember how I ascertained the population of the city of Newark in 1906 but I don't remember that I heard that the Newark Water Works company was not supplying water to private consumers, except when the pumps at their plant were run at the full capacity.

"The pumps at the old water works plant were practically obsolete in my opinion and I thought that bigger pumps should be installed, and I believed at the time that Newark was growing more rapidly than most cities of its size, owing to factories being located.

"Before our employment, I don't remember that the Board of Public Service asked us as to the work being done on the Davis pumps, and as to the advisability of changing the capacity of the pumps.

"I carefully examined the pumps called for in the Davis plans.

"Were not the pumps installed at your advice, practically the same as those contemplated by the Davis plans, except as to capacity?"

"Yes, sir, they were made by the same firm, and were of the same general design," answered Mr. Sherman.

"My first visit to the Platt Iron Works was made when I received a notice that the castings were ready for inspection, that had been made for the Newark plant. This was about May 1, 1907, but I was in Dayton later.

"The essential difference between the pumps under the Davis plans and those as finally installed as I was impressed, was in regard to the capacity. I thought that Newark should have larger pumps than those contemplated in the Davis designs, but the weight of the pumps installed were practically of the same design as those designated by the Davis plans.

"I don't want to qualify as an expert mechanical engineer. Our contract was made with the American Light and Water company, and the pumps installed in Newark were practically the same as those in Fremont, which were installed by the Platt Iron Works. I had received word from our sub-engineer that the pumps at Fremont had failed in their efficiency.

"I should think that the price of $1500 for the two pumps at Fremont was extremely low, and we made our bids on this fact. In the face of very sharp competition, and were built for comparative light service. The ones (Continued on Page 9, Col. 2)

WEDNESDAY EVENING'S SESSION

At Wednesday evening's session of the water works investigation, Mr. James R. Fitzgibbon took the stand and the first question asked by Examiner Heck was:

"Do you know anything about the organization of the Tallmadge Realty company?"

"I know all about it," replied Mr. Fitzgibbon. "As I prepared the articles for the organization of the firm. The amount of the capitalization was

"The minutes of our meetings were not complete because the company was organized as a corporation, more from the idea of convenience than any other.

"Mr. E. W. Crayton secured the option on the land which was turned over to James K. Hamill. This land was afterward purchased by the city. As a matter of fact, our company met only to declare dividends, and now the company really consists of Mr. Hamill and myself. We own some lots near the water works site at the present time."

"Was Mr. J. P. Lamb a member of the Tallmadge Realty company?"

"Yes, sir, but I know that he had no interest in the purchase of the land, and soon after the organization of the company he sold his stock. Mr. Lamb was not benefited in the sale of the land by the Tallmadge Realty company, in any way that was questionable."

THURSDAY MORNING.

Mr. W. J. Sherman again took the stand and testified substantially as follows:

"As regards the installation of pumps at the Newark plant, I would say that different estimates would be gotten from the firm, known as the 'pump trust'. The pumps installed here I would say, were as good as any installed at any plant which I visited.

"The pumps at Fremont, O., were installed by the Platt Iron Works, and those recommended to the Newark Board of Public Service by us. There should have been no material difference in the cost of the pumps.

"I recommended, in a letter written to the Newark Service Board, the same pumps as used at Fremont.

"I don't believe that I received any word from any member of the Board of Public Service before I wrote the letter recommending the installation of the pumps manufactured by the Platt Iron Works.

"As to the fact that the Platt Iron Works were to install pumps of 5,000,000 gallons capacity, of the same rating as the 3,000,000 gallon pumps contemplated by the Davis plans, the increased cost of the pumps as recommended by me, and those of the Davis plans was $2,000.

"Mr. Sherman made a correction of his testimony as given Wednesday, and stated that he had made a trip to Dayton before he had signed the contract with the city and visited the Platt Iron Works."

"Continuing he said (after referring to data which was shown him by Mr. E. A. Smith):

"The capacity of the pumps in Newark was to be 5,000,000 gallons. We received a letter from the Platt Iron Works in which the Newark Service Board had made a proposition of 4,000,000 gallon pumps.

"The two 5,000,000 gallon pumps should have cost the city of Newark about $25,000, and they did cost $25,300. I am basing my calculations upon the cost of the pumps at Fremont."

"I should think that the price of $1500 for the two pumps at Fremont was extremely low, and we made our bids on this fact. In the face of very sharp competition, and were built for comparative light service. The ones

Answer to Wednesday's puzzle—History.

FIRST PHOTOS OF THE PANAMA CANAL FLOOD WHEN THE CHAGRES RIVER FILLED BIG TRENCH

The two views of the flooded portions of the Panama canal printed herewith are produced from the first photographs to reach this country from the canal zone since the recent rise in the Chagres river, which gave the canal work a hard blow in the region of San Pablo. The other photographs show the progress of the work prior to the flood in these same sections. The Chagres river, which empties into the Caribbean sea near the northern entrance to the canal, is a treacherous stream and has given the engineers a vast amount of trouble and at various times it has threatened the canal work. Its floods have caused immense damage on several occasions. The heavy rains, have now subsided, however, and the stream has resumed its normal condition. During the big storms of the last few weeks mails to and from Panama were delayed, the train service across the isthmus being deranged for several days. The recent report of the isthmian canal commission shows that while the gigantic project is marching rapidly toward completion, it is a much bigger enterprise than any one thought it would be at the start. It is now estimated that the canal will have cost nearer $275,000,000 when completed, instead of the $200,000,000, which was the recent estimate a year ago.

LOBBYISTS FLOCKING TO COLUMBUS IN INTEREST OF COLD STORAGE MEN

Columbus, Jan. 13.—Lobbyists are already flocking to Columbus in the interest of the cold storage men and commission men, who have reason to dread an investigation into the increased cost of living in Ohio. Nothing will be left undone to maintain control of the lion share of the workers' wage that is diverted some place between the producer and the consumer.

Letters are pouring in to the legislators both from their constituents who are suffering from the high prices, and from their constituents who are benefiting. Senator Beatty says that he is strongly urged in the interest of cold storage men to cut back his investigation resolution.

With this clash of interest, against the legislature, the question of the personnel of the committee and its attorney became even a bigger issue today than it was yesterday. Williams, an editor of Jackson, Ohio, a manufacturer of Arcabold, and Cetone, a commercial salesman, of Dayton, are mentioned as the probable members of the committee, and all are anxious to serve.

A farmer and an attorney will probably be the house members. Those mentioned are: E. W. Piqua, a Democrat; Hatfield, of Clark county, a Democrat; Hatfield, of Clark county, a Republican; G. A. Field, of Fayette, a Republican; and Wilbur of Union county, a Republican, all former members, and Schaubley of Cleveland and Russell, of Creston, are most talked of as the attorney members.

Senator Beatty, whose resolution created the investigation, is in favor of Ex-Prosecutor Wacheneimer, of Toledo, and so far Wacheneimer is the only man who has been urged for counsel.

When the Beatty resolution for an investigation of the increased cost of living passed the house, the lieutenant governor was seated on the day with the speaker of the house, apparently discussing the personnel of the committee. Eight Republican members of the house were the only ones who voted against the resolution. They were Blanton and Jones of Franklin, Guard of Crawford, Le Blond of Hamilton, Ritter of Miami, Wheeler of Union, Howes of Wilbur and Wood of Clinton.

COUNTRY'S PRODUCTION MUST BE INCREASED

Or We Shall Not Produce Food Enough to Supply Our Own Necessities Said President Brown of New York Central

Wages of Labor Must Also Advance in Ratio With Advance in Cost of Living---Railroad Men Meet at New England Club Dinner.

St. Louis, Jan. 13.—We must increase production by the acre by more intelligent methods or we must face the relentless certainty that when we shall not produce food enough to supply our own necessities, said President William C. Brown of the New York Central Railroad in an address last night before the New England Railroad club.

The wages of labor he declared, must continue to advance in fair ratio with the steady increase in the cost of living.

Many representatives of railroad interests were gathered about the banquet tables at the Hotel Somerset in addition to President Brown, Governor Eben S. Dyer was also a principal guest and speaker.

President W. C. Brown's speech, coming as it does at the height of a new floodtide of national prosperity, was intended for a warning of the most serious import.

It gains added force by its reiteration of the recent admonitions of James J. Hill as well as those of visiting students of our internal affairs, and it is especially timely in view of the fact that the employees of the railroads east of the Mississippi river are formulating demands for an increase in wages, based on the increased cost of living.

"We must go up in the same proportion that the purchasing power of the money the laborer earns goes down," Mr. Brown said in part.

The most portentous cloud discernible upon the political or economic horizon at this time is the steady, relentless increase in price of everything that goes to make up the cost of living.

With a succession of bountiful harvests the price of grain has steadily advanced until prices of 1906-08 show increases over those of 1903 as follows:

"Corn, an increase of 111.2 per cent, oats an increase of 85.1 per cent, wheat, an increase of 53.5 per cent, potatoes, an increase of 50.5 per cent, hay, an increase of 49.7 per cent. With a normal increase and no disease to deplete our herds, values have increased marvelously.

"Notwithstanding the advent of the automobile, horse and mules show an increase in value of more than 70 per cent. The products of the forest make an equally marvelous showing. Anthracite and bituminous coal have advanced 29 and 42 per cent respectively, hard 13 per cent, pork $2 per cent and tallow 72 per cent.

"During this time farm land in all parts of the West and Middle West has fully doubled in value. This unusual phase of steady rising values, in the face of a long succession of bountiful crops is one of the most important as well as interesting problems that confront the political economist today.

"Economists agree that there is a direct relation between the quantity of gold that is the basis of value and the general industrial condition. The gold production of the world for the year 1909 was approximately $202,000,000. For 1908 it was approximately $145,000,000, an increase of 120 per cent.

"The significance of these facts in their effect upon present and future values may be better comprehended when we recall the fact that gold is undiminished in some form, the gold that Columbus carried in the caravels is in existence, unchanged today.

"The coal grown in 1909 has been almost consumed. The coal mined last year has been burned but the gold produced year after year piles up and as it accumulates it takes more gold to buy a bushel of wheat, a suit of clothes, a home of beerstead, a sack of flour or any other necessities of life.

"For this reason the navy of labor is steadily advanced and must continue to advance in some ratio with the increase in the cost of living. Things that must buy, for instance, in another way wages must go up in the same proportion that the purchasing power of the money the laborer earns goes down.

"Another force is working for a more powerful and with a sinister significance coupled with which is the alarming reports, which which consumption of the products of the nation's farms is overtaking production.

"Statistics show that the failure to increase the product of our farms in something like the ratio of increase in consumption is exerting more than three times the effect upon the cost of living than the increase of gold is having.

"If the conserving lines of production and consumption in the United States continue to approach each other as they have during the last 10 years before the middle of the decade upon which we have just entered has been reached the last vessel loaded with the agricultural products of this country will have left our shores, the exporting grain elevators in our seaboard cities will stand empty and this great nation like those of the old world, will be looking for a place to buy the necessities of life.

"There is no alternative. We must increase production per acre by some intelligent methods or we must face the relentless certainty that when we shall not produce food enough to supply our necessities."

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 13.—In the arrest here today of Harry Lavine, alias Friedman, Fine and Saut, charged with selling way bills of bogus shipments in cities along the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, the Pittsburgh police and M. A. Ogline, head of the road's police department, believe one of the most expert railroad swindlers of recent years was captured.

Lavine's method of swindling was to ship three or four barrels or large boxes, said to contain such rubber and brass, and then sell the bill of lading to junk dealers and firms dealing in such material. Upon presentation of the way bill, instead of containing rubber and brass the boxes were found loaded with sand and stones.

MELTING SNOW MAY CAUSE BIG FLOOD IN CITY

A flood is feared in Newark, and there is every indication that if the snow melts rapidly one of the worst inundations in the history of the city will occur. There is nearly a foot of snow covering the ground and should this melt rapidly instead of gradually a flood is a practical certainty. Many of the people living in the low parts of the city are practically prepared to leave their homes if the water in the rivers should rise.

In Zanesville, Coshocton and Columbus the weather bureaus have been notified that floods are likely to occur and farmers are moving their stock and grain that they have stored along the bottom land, in anticipation of a flood.

A light rain started to fall in Newark Wednesday afternoon and it continued practically all night. Thursday morning the streets and sidewalks were covered with combination of ice and slush from the melting snow, and walking was terrible. Shoe stores did a big business selling boots and rubbers to pedestrians, who found the snow water would soak through the best of shoe leather.

Damage from water was reported from several stores and many houses where the melting snow on the roofs would come through the plastering, spouting pipes and jamming furniture and carpets. Probably the most severe damage from this source was at the Hubbert & Seaborn building, Main and Second streets.

The melting snow on the roof of the building, forced its way through the roof and did much damage to the lodge room on the third floor. Several lodges meet in this room, which was drenched by the water, causing a loss that has not been estimated.

From the third floor the water drained down the south wall into the Griggs dry goods store and did some little damage to the stock during the night. When the clerks arrived this morning they were set to work removing stock from shelves and the damage is not thought to be large.

Men were at once sent to the roof and the snow was shoveled from it as rapidly as possible to prevent further damage from this source.

AVONDALE SOLD TO WM. BERGEN OF THIS CITY

The Avondale property, better known of late years as "Bruno," which is located on Buckeye Lake, on the Straitsville division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, was sold on Wednesday by Mr. Jacob Shrader, the proprietor, to Mr. William Bergen, of this city, the consideration being $3000. Mr. Shrader has been located at Avondale for the past nine years. During his management the hotel and general surroundings have become very popular as a pleasure resort to the people of Newark and vicinity. The transfer carried with it all the hotel property used by Mr. Shrader in their business. Possession is to be given Mr. Bergen March 1. It is Mr. Bergen's intention to make extensive improvements costing several thousands of dollars, and when all the improvements are completed it will be one of the most thoroughly up-to-date hostleries in this section of the state. No expense will be spared to make Avondale a favorite resort for pleasure seekers. Avondale is generally recognized as being the best fishing grounds on the lake, and with the line of boats that Mr. Bergen will install between Buckeye Lake and Avondale during the season, will bring a large number of fishermen who probably have never been there before. Mr. Bergen's plans contemplate a modern hotel with excellent chefs in charge.

Making Money On the Farm

VIII.—Potato Culture

WHETHER grown for market or for home use only, it is important that the potato crop be made to grow as much as possible. With the right kind of care yields of 20 to 30 bushels to the acre can be obtained. This is one of the most productive crops that can be grown. Even with the most careful treatment the later frequently yields most profusely.

The potato is very particular in its soil requirements. A rich sandy loam is the best soil. Not all farms have such a soil, but almost any soil can be prepared as to make a fairly good potato patch. Two things are essential, moisture and plenty of moisture. Clay is too heavy, and sand dries out too rapidly. Soils which contain too much clay or too much sand can be greatly improved for the production of potatoes by the addition of humus. The ideal way to prepare a field for potatoes is to seed it to clover for at least a year, mow it heavily, plow it up and plant it to corn. In the fall the corn can be cut for silage or fodder, so that it can be plowed before winter. The plowing should be fairly deep. Two diskings and a harrowing or two the following spring make an ideal seed bed for potatoes.

Potatoes are not raised from seed, but from the swollen underground stems that we call tubers or potatoes. Any piece of a tuber that contains an "eye" will grow and produce more of its kind. A potato vine grown from a piece of a tuber is really not a new plant, but part of the old one. If outside conditions are the same the plant will be the same and produce the same kind of a crop. There is much less tendency to vary in plants propagated in this way than in those raised from seed.

Large Versus Small Potatoes.

Because of the fact that the potato is not a seed it has been claimed that small potatoes would produce just as good crops as large ones. Growers often sort out and plant the tubers that are too small for market. The outcome of four or five years of such selection almost always means a decreased yield. If the potatoes planted were small only because they did not have a chance to develop they would produce nearly as good results as larger ones from the same hill. If, however, they were small because they came from a hill of tubers all of which were naturally small they would produce mostly small potatoes like themselves. For this reason it is not safe to plant the small tubers. Another important point is that there is not enough food material in a small potato to give the sprout the kind of a start that it needs to produce a good yield. It is the stocky, vigorous hills that are full of large potatoes when digging time comes. The start the plant gets while it is first making its way to the surface of the ground largely determines the vigor with which it will continue to grow throughout the season.

The experience of most potato growers is that it is best to plant medium sized tubers, about the size of a hen's egg or larger, cutting each one into four pieces. In experiments that were conducted along this line quarters gave a yield of seven bushels to the acre more than two eye pieces and fifteen bushels more than one eye piece.

The seed potatoes should be kept in a dark place until planting time to keep them from sprouting as much as possible. New sprouts will grow if the old ones are broken off, but they will not be as strong. If the seed is at all scabby it should be treated before planting. This is done by soaking the tubers for two hours in a solution of one pound of formalin to forty gallons of water. Afterward the potatoes should be spread out to dry and then cut. The cutting should not be done until just before planting, as otherwise they will shrivel and lose some of their vitality. The plan of getting the seed potatoes cut several weeks or even days before planting is not to be commended. Even if the seed thus prepared is kept in a dark cellar the starch part of the tuber is certain to lose much of its freshness, and the vitality of the seed may be impaired.

Planting.

Early potatoes should be planted as soon as the ground can be worked. The later varieties, which comprise the bulk of the crop, should be planted about corn planting time or a little later. In the corn belt it is most convenient to mark off the rows with the corn planter. Where land is high and it is desired to work it to its fullest capacity the rows may be as close as three feet. Where ten or more acres are grown a potato planter will soon pay for itself. Where the acreage is smaller than this two or three neighbors can often combine to purchase such a machine.

Where hand planting is practiced the rows should be opened with a stirring plow to a depth of four to six inches. The practice of dropping the tubers in a cultivator track and covering them lightly is responsible for many of the low yields. Potatoes send up a strong sprout that is able to penetrate six inches of soil easily, and the roots need to be well down in the moist earth. After the tubers are dropped the stirring plow may again be brought into use to cover them, or a disk cultivator may be used. The main thing is to get them covered deeply. After covering two or three narrow rows should be given to level the ground and kill any sprouting weeds.

The cut tubers should be dropped from twelve to sixteen inches apart, one in a place. The amount of seed to use per acre will depend on the price. If seed potatoes are not too expensive it pays to be liberal with them. Where medium sized potatoes are cut into quarters and dropped every fifteen inches in rows three and one-half feet apart twelve to fifteen bushels per acre will be needed.

On western farms, where land is cheap and labor scarce, potatoes are often planted in rows both ways. This can be readily done by running a planter wire across the field and dropping a piece of potato at each button on the wire. The wire is moved at each end as in planting corn. When planted in this way half a tuber instead of a quarter should be dropped in a place. Such a plan will not give as good a yield as drilling, provided the drilled potatoes are kept free from weeds. The checked potatoes can be cultivated both ways and kept clean with but little hand labor and will yield more than a weedy patch planted twice as thick. The feasibility of the plan depends entirely upon the relative cost of land and labor.

A good harrowing after the plants are two or three inches high will destroy many weeds and loosen the dirt in the row. Deep planted potatoes are not injured by such a harrowing. A few days after this the cultivator should be started and the field cultivated once a week or oftener until the blossoms appear. It pays to hoe or pull any weeds that come up in the rows. No one thing will reduce the yield of potatoes more than weeds. The ground should be left nearly level at the last cultivation. Deep planting makes hilling unnecessary.

Spraying For Insects and Diseases.

The potato beetle is the one serious insect enemy of the potato crop. The most prevalent disease other than scab is blight. This affects the leaves, causing them to turn black and curl up. Both blight and beetles can be readily controlled by spraying with Bordeaux paris green mixture. This is made as follows: Four pounds copper sulphate, four pounds fresh lime, four ounces paris green and fifty gallons of water.

Dissolve the copper sulphate in twenty-five gallons of the water and the lime in the rest. Then pour the two solutions together. Make the paris green into a paste with a little water, and stir it into the mixture. It pays to have a good hand sprayer to apply this solution or a power machine if many acres are grown. A hand sprayer can be bought for $5 or $6. If equipped with two nozzles so as to take two rows at once it will not take more than an hour to go over an acre. The entire expense, including the labor, will be repaid several times over by the increase in yield. Three or four sprayings will be sufficient, starting about the time the plants are six inches high and continuing at intervals of a week or ten days until they are in bloom.

Digging the Crop.

Where a large acreage of potatoes is grown or where several neighbors each raise a few acres every year, a digger is a paying investment. It leaves the tubers on top of the ground in good shape to be picked up and gets practically all of them. Where only a few are grown they can be forked out, but this is a slow job. The most common practice is to plow them out. By picking them up after the plow, then harrowing twice and picking up after each harrowing, few will be left. If the field is so located that the hogs can be turned in on it, they get all that were missed. As soon as dug, which should be before severe freezing weather, the potatoes should be piled up and covered with straw and dirt. Here they may be left until the ground begins to freeze, when they may be put in the cellar or hauled to market. If the pile is on a well drained place it may be covered with a foot to eighteen inches of straw and as much dirt and safely left till spring. There are many potato growers, especially those of foreign extraction, who never keep their crop in any other way. While the dry indoor method has numerous advantages, such as readiness for use in all weather and convenience of handling, there is much to commend the outdoor storage plan. There are even those who contend that the flavor of the tuber is only to be maintained by storing it in the pit.

V.—Getting on in the World

YES, that's all right, Bill," said Colonel Sneed to his son-in-law as they smoked their after dinner cigars. "That's all right, I'm mighty glad to hear you've been promoted and got a raise. I'm mighty glad to see you climbing up the ladder of success. I like to see a man with ambition and pluck and ginger, and I glory in your spunk, my boy. I certainly do. But you haven't been home much of evenin', lately, have you?"

"No, colonel, I haven't. Work's been pretty heavy the last few months, and it's kept me at the office almost every night. I don't like that part of it much, but a fellow's got to hustle if he gets along in the world these days."

"Oh, huh! That's about the way I'd sized it up, and as I was first tellin' you, I like to see that kind of a spirit in a young man; but, son, if government bonds were quoted at ninety-six and a man was to go around town sayin' all he could get at a dollar ten what would you think of him?"

"I'd think he was a fool of course."

"Oh, huh! So would I. So would everybody. I don't reckon there's anything better than government bonds."

They make the finest kind of wad for a safe deposit box, and as works of art, they're mighty hard to beat, but any man who pays more than the market price for 'em is a bigger fool than Thompson's colt. It's a good deal the same way with this thing you call gettin' on in the world. It's fine, it's worth a whole lot, but there's such a thing as payin' too much for it. And, William, my boy, when a man gives up all or nearly all that makes life worth livin' in order to win financial success he's sellin' short on happiness with a mighty slim chance to get hold of the stock for delivery.

"Yes, I know what you'll say—you're workin' to get a start, to lay a foundation of a little fortune, to provide the right kind of a home for your wife—and I'm pattin' you on the back all the time and sayin' 'Bully boy!' That's the sort of stuff that makes men; that's the power that makes the world go round. But a man wants to be mighty careful that he don't keep on runnin' around the track after the finish, and he wants to look out that he don't lose diamonds while he's scroumlin' for pennies. My old father was a country doctor, and he always carried his quinine and calomel and such like in a big pair of saddlebags. I remember one time he had to get up in the middle of the night and ride ten miles to see a patient. It was an urgent case, and the old gentleman went down the road like Satan beatin' taubark. His saddlebags bounce up and down at every jump. When he got to the place he found a strap had broke and every bit of his medicine had been scattered along the road."

"Many a man goes lopin' along the road to riches with his nose to the ground like a bound hushin' a fox. He don't see anything but the tracks of the fellows who've gone that way before him, and he's a doggone anxious to catch up with them that he don't know he's got holes in his pockets and is losin' things a lot more valuable than the one he's huntin' after. He don't know that he's dropped his wife's just one dime—to do somethin' big and fine for the woman he loved. The purpose was all right, you see, Bill, but they let it run away with them. That's what I want you to avoid, my boy, and that's why I'm givin' you this kind of a talk now."

"You're married the sweetest little girl this side of the pearly gates, if I do say it myself, and if you want success to be worth anything when you get it, go down the long road with her arm linked in yours, and don't go so fast but what she can keep up with you. You remember the Lord said, 'It ain't good for man to be alone,' and it's a good deal worse for woman to be alone. When a man begins to leave his wife to fret out her evenin's by herself, he's layin' the foundations for trouble. That old sayin' that aloneness makes the heart grow fonder is all poppycock. It don't do anything of the sort, and if you become so engrossed in the struggle to get on in the world that you can't get home to dinner more than once or twice a week and have to spend most of your evenin's at the office you're pretty sure to find the keen edge of love wearin' off in her heart or yours after awhile. The dullin' process may be so slow that neither one of you may know it's goin' on until it's too late, but sooner or later, son, you'll find it out, and then you might as well shut up the shop, for no man and no woman can be really happy without love, and love won't stay long in any home unless it's fed. A woman's love will starve under neglect, and a man's love will shrivel up if he gets so full of business that he has no time to think of anything else. Gettin' on in the world is a great thing, a very great thing, if love lights the way, but if it don't—well, you take an old man's advice, my boy, and keep your ambition down to union hours. You may not get there so quick, but you'll get there all right, and when you do there'll be some satisfaction in the arrival. And now let's go out and take a look at the baby."

How Bees Find Their Way.

How are bees able to find their way home after their long forays after honey? Gaston Bonnier of Paris has been studying their directive sense, which he thinks is like that possessed by pigeons. Bees can fly for two miles from the hive and are then able to return after gathering their supply of honey. Langstroth and others suppose that vision comes into play and that bees can see for a great distance and can also note objects on the way so as to find their path. Others, with Dant, suppose that the bees are guided by the sense of smell and that they can smell flowers at distances of one and a half miles. M. Bonnier has made experiments to prove that bees can return to the hive without using either sight or odor. As to sight, he took bees to a distance of one and two-tenths miles from the hive in a closed box. They always flew back to the hive when released. The same is true when their eyes were covered, so that sight was not essential.

As regards odor, experiments seem to prove that bees perceive odors at only short distances. When a needle dipped in ether is brought near the head of the bee, it shows signs of perceiving the odor, but not so when the needle is placed back of him or near other organs. Besides, when the organs of smell (antennae) are removed entirely the bees will return to the hive. M. Bonnier made the following experiment: At 600 feet from the hive he placed a supply of sirup, and the bees soon found it, proceeding to and from the hive. Such bees he marked with green colored powder. He then placed a second supply of sirup at the same distance from the hive, but spaced at twenty feet from the former. Other bees were now engaged in the to and fro movements to this point, but these were not the same individuals as the green marked ones, who were still working on the first supply, and he marked these in red. This gave two distinct sets of bees, able to distinguish two directions which formed a very acute angle. These facts M. Bonnier believes indicate a special directive sense which does not reside in the antennae, but probably in the cere-bral ganglia.

Notes and Comment

Of Interest to Women Readers

BACHELORS CAUGHT BY STYLE.

If Girls Wish to Wed They Must Wear Pretty Clothes.

The girl who goes to the seaside with the intention of coming back engaged is generally well dressed. A pretty dress means so much when you are going to make an impression. Men are susceptible to good looks and nice clothes. And even to nice clothes without the good looks. If a girl hasn't actual beauty but is well dressed, men will say, "She looks like a nice girl."

Love is ever in league with the dressmaker, and even Beauty cannot afford to ignore the modes. It is natural for a girl to like pretty frocks, and what man is there that doesn't want a natural, human girl when he marries?

Besides, a perfect toilette explains so many things. There's the joy of life in a new hat, and the shining tresses that nestle beneath it. Good temper and vivacity lurk in the folds of crepe-de-Chine. The softness of love flutters in new laces and ribbons. A pretty dress may mean a fortune if it is instrumental in bringing about an engagement. Everybody recognizes the importance of appearances. None better than the match-making mother.

It is always when Betty is looking "lovelier than ever in her exquisite costume" that Billy decides to propose, and does so.

Really, men are much more sensible than is generally supposed. They appreciate the fact that a woman who takes a pride in her appearance is more likely to be a credit to them than one that just has her good looks to rely on.

Beauty fades, but new dresses go on forever. Some women have a remarkable habit of dressing badly, and even a pretty face won't save them. The result is that, if they marry at all, it is some man who doesn't bother about dress. Such men are a blot upon our fair land.

How much are veils responsible for! Unprepossessing features take on a magic charm through a veil. By the time that a man discovers faults in a nose and mouth, the charms of a perfect costume have had their effect.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To remove pitch, wheel grease, tar stains—soften the stains with lard, then soak in turpentine. Scrape off carefully with a knife, all the loose surface dirt; sponge clean with turpentine and rub gently till dry.

Whale bone may be easily cut if it is first immersed in hot water for a few minutes.

To remove grease from silk, moisten the spots with chloroform and rub with a cloth till dry.

Match marks on a polished or varnished surface may be removed by first rubbing with a cut lemon and then with a cloth dipped in water.

The Woman Who Failed.

Sometimes I wonder if I could have held his love longer had I dressed more and been more careful that he should never see me unless I was attractively gowned. When I look back I am filled with dismay to think how often he has seen me when I must have been most unattractive. It is true that seventeen years of married life have made me careless. I remember all the lacy, delicate, perfumed lingerie of my wedding trousseau, and how he used to admire them and call them "frillkins." But now I wear the plainest and sometimes most unbecoming things. I have felt that it was unnecessary and even extravagant to spend so much money on lingerie; instead, I have put it in the house—in rugs, cut glass, and silver—in things I could "keep."

Oh, how foolish I have been! How much wiser to have bought some expensive morning gowns than that solid silver tea set this fall. The gowns would have made me more attractive every morning at breakfast, and the tea service—I don't think he has ever noticed it.

And in the evening for dinner—how rarely I made any effort to dress when we dine out or have some one dining with us. What am I saving them for? I can have plenty more. Oh, how blind I have been! Why have I worn them only for the benefit of others? What do I gain from the passing admiration of strangers or even friends—compared to the admiration of my husband? Is it too late to begin anew? Can I ever efface the impression years of indifference dressing have made upon him?—From "The Journal of a Neglected Wife."

Married Men Favored.

In the town of Strasburg, Germany, discrimination is made in favor of married couples with children in the matter of municipal salaries. Ten per cent. is deducted from the wages of men between 20 and 25 who are not married and afterward five per cent.

In the divorce case of Amy F. Tragar vs. Chas. Tragar, Probate Judge Brister handed down his decision on Wednesday afternoon. The parties are both well known and highly respected residents of the East End. They are quite young, the husband being only 23 years old and the wife 19 years old. They have been married about two years. Each party charged the other with cruelty and gross neglect of duty. The chief complaint of the husband was that his wife visited her mother too often and did not prepare his meals regularly. The parties have a baby boy about one year old. The chief difficulty seemed to be the interference of outside parties. Judge Brister decided Wednesday afternoon that neither person had any cause of action and refused the divorce. In giving his decision the judge took occasion to deliver quite a lecture on marriage and its sacred responsibilities, and advised the young people to make up and be happy, and for outsiders to mind their own business and not interfere any more. Russell & Horner represented the plaintiff and B. G. Smythe the defendant.

All Over America, the News of the Marvellous Dandruff Cures of Parisian Sage Has Spread.
A few years ago there was introduced into America a cure for dandruff, falling hair and all scalp diseases. News of the quick action of this wonderful invigorator spread rapidly.
And today without any sensational or untrue advertising, Parisian Sage is used extensively in almost every town in America. And what has produced this great demand? Simply this: Parisian Sage does just what we are telling the readers of the Advocate it will do.
We claim, and we back our claim with T. J. Evans' money back guarantee, that Parisian Sage is the most invigorating and rejuvenating hair tonic. It cures dandruff, stops falling hair and itching scalp; it makes the hair grow strong and lustrous, yet soft and lustrous. It is the only hair dressing that reaches the root bulb of the hair and destroys the dandruff germ.
And to the women who are reading this simple statement of fact, we want to say that Parisian Sage works wonders with women's hair. It will turn dull, harsh and faded hair into beautiful, radiant and lustrous hair in a few days, and is the most pleasant and satisfying dressing any woman ever used.
Druggists everywhere and T. J. Evans sell Parisian Sage for 50 cents a large bottle.

BEST HAIR TONIC
All Over America, the News of the Marvellous Dandruff Cures of Parisian Sage Has Spread.
A few years ago there was introduced into America a cure for dandruff, falling hair and all scalp diseases. News of the quick action of this wonderful invigorator spread rapidly.
And today without any sensational or untrue advertising, Parisian Sage is used extensively in almost every town in America. And what has produced this great demand? Simply this: Parisian Sage does just what we are telling the readers of the Advocate it will do.
We claim, and we back our claim with T. J. Evans' money back guarantee, that Parisian Sage is the most invigorating and rejuvenating hair tonic. It cures dandruff, stops falling hair and itching scalp; it makes the hair grow strong and lustrous, yet soft and lustrous. It is the only hair dressing that reaches the root bulb of the hair and destroys the dandruff germ.
And to the women who are reading this simple statement of fact, we want to say that Parisian Sage works wonders with women's hair. It will turn dull, harsh and faded hair into beautiful, radiant and lustrous hair in a few days, and is the most pleasant and satisfying dressing any woman ever used.
Druggists everywhere and T. J. Evans sell Parisian Sage for 50 cents a large bottle.

The divorce case of Nora E. Morris vs. William O. Morris, was decided by Judge Brister Thursday afternoon. The parties are young people, have been married about five years and have a little daughter. The plaintiff was given a decree and the present custody of the child, the father to have custody of the child one-half of the time if he so desired, and during the time the child is in the custody of the mother, the father is to pay her alimony in the sum of $16 per month for her support and that of the child. A joint meeting of the boards of Inquiry Directors of Perry and Licking counties was held in the office of the Licking County Commissioners on Thursday. The meeting was held for the purpose of consulting in regard to the Iva Cotterman case, adjusting accounts in that case between the two counties, and for the transaction of other business. The Board of Directors of Perry county is composed of Messrs. W. E. Conway, president; Henry Burns, vice president, and J. W. Mitchell, clerk, of Somerset, while the Licking county board is composed of James Redman, president; P. W. Brubaker, vice president, and Frank R. Dudgeon, clerk.
Dismissed Petition.
In the divorce case of Amy F. Tragar vs. Chas. Tragar, Probate Judge Brister handed down his decision on Wednesday afternoon. The parties are both well known and highly respected residents of the East End. They are quite young, the husband being only 23 years old and the wife 19 years old. They have been married about two years. Each party charged the other with cruelty and gross neglect of duty. The chief complaint of the husband was that his wife visited her mother too often and did not prepare his meals regularly. The parties have a baby boy about one year old. The chief difficulty seemed to be the interference of outside parties. Judge Brister decided Wednesday afternoon that neither person had any cause of action and refused the divorce. In giving his decision the judge took occasion to deliver quite a lecture on marriage and its sacred responsibilities, and advised the young people to make up and be happy, and for outsiders to mind their own business and not interfere any more. Russell & Horner represented the plaintiff and B. G. Smythe the defendant.

A BLUNDER INTO WISDOM
Never before in all his life had Billy Le Voe been to walk with a girl. Even now it was no fault of his that Peggy Carlsen was along. He had, in fact, fought bitterly against it, but his cherished younger brother, Bob, had wished a clear field that evening in order that he might make certain statements of unusual interest to Peggy's younger sister, Polly. Bob had demonstrated amply that, to attain this end Billy must take sister to walk. Now Billy had never had any use for girls, and could not understand his brother's interest in them, but he had never denied the "kid" anything. So in the end shutting his teeth firmly upon his rapidly ebbing courage, he stalked over to the next house to deliver his invitation.
"We'll go to the shore through Brendon Lane, and then we'll come back by the State road," he said. Peggy, who was still consumed with wonderment at having been invited at all, made no reply, and in unadulterated silence they entered the quiet, grassy path which he had selected.
"It's a lovely night," Peggy ventured after a time.
"Night's all right," granted Billy, leaving it to be inferred from his emphasis that the night possessed a corner in righteousness. He was in no mood for scenery, being on a quest for something sensible to say. He did not succeed, and the birds had the silence to themselves. Peggy tried again.
"Where's Bob this evening?" she inquired sociably.
"Over at your place. He said he wanted the parlor to himself."
"So that's why you asked me to go to walk?" Billy was aghast at his mistake, and also at the way Peggy took it, for she stood still in the middle of the lane and laughed till the tears came.
"I hope you don't mind," he offered lamely.
"Not—not if you don't," replied Peggy, wiping her eyes; and of course in order to be decently polite Billy had to assert that he was enjoying himself immensely, all of which was very educative indeed for Billy.
After this they talked of the Polly-and-Bob affair, and agreed that the children were absurdly young to think of matrimony. The crickets were chirping in an undertone, and a light wind stirred the leaves.
"It is a nice night," Billy heard himself saying, and was surprised again at himself this time.
Just then they rounded a little curve in the lane; the woods on the right had dropped behind, and in their place stretched a broad meadow with only a low stone wall between. Billy, glancing ahead, saw that which brought him to an abrupt stop. Directly in their path and dangerously near sat a pretty black-and-white pussie.
Billy was certain that girls in critical situations invariably scream; so Peggy presently found herself swept off her feet and being borne rapidly over a stone wall and across a poetized it, you know." This only seemed to increase the girl's resentment.
"What right had you to think I would scream?" she demanded.
"Why, any girl would," he assured her, to air his knowledge of the sex, as well as to assuage her wrath. There was an uncomfortable pause.
"Are you still mad?" he inquired plaintively, after a time.
"Somehow, I can't seem to be," she confessed. Billy felt absurdly relieved, but pulled himself together and said gruffly:
"The State road's over there to the right; we'll have to cut across lots." They were in the geometrical centre of a 10-acre field.
"How very wet the grass is!" marvelled Peggy. "Do you suppose the 'sort of a cat' had rubbers on, Billy?"
"You haven't, at any rate," he discovered and drew a long breath. "You'll have to let me carry you again," he stated boldly, adding quickly, however, "but there really isn't any hurry; Bob won't be expecting us—and the grass won't get any wetter, anyway." So they staved and discussed the scenery. Above the horizon the sky was clear gold; it reminded Billy of a ring which Bob had gotten a few days before, anticipating a future need.
"That kid brother of mine knows a heap more about girls than I do," he confessed with sudden humility.
"He has learned a lot from Polly," suggested Peggy, the sibyls.
Billy thought the idea all his own, and a fully clever, too. "Say, Peggy, would you—would you mind sort of coaching a fellow?" he asked eagerly. "I know I'm an awful clump, but if you would you know—"
"Don't be rash," she begged; "you might have to take me to walk again!"
"Who's afraid?" demanded Billy manfully. "Let's shake on it." Which having done, they had another silence, this one by mutual consent. Peggy was the first to notice that the moon had risen.
"And the grass is wet," she admitted.
"Bully for the geranium kitten!" said Billy Le Voe, some time later, as they stood on her doorstep. "Let's see if it's still there to-morrow, Peggy!"—KATHERINE CROSBY.

This Great Sale Begins Jan. 14th, Friday, at 9 O'clock

Store will be closed Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to arrange and re-mark all stocks to be ready for the buying public at 9 o'clock Friday morning, January 14th, 1910. Every Suit and Overcoat in stock must go. ### There Is No Alternative as Stocks Must Go—Cash Must Come In

Every day will be a feature day during this sale, as buying opportunities will be irresistible in every department.

No Disappointments

We have long contemplated making certain alterations throughout our store and building to meet our requirements, the same being deferred owing to unavoidable circumstances, will now be carried out as originally intended.

We are heavily loaded, and must make room in order to carry out our plans and realize the cash, which is absolutely necessary in this important undertaking.

The disposal of this stupendous stock in a short space of time means a greater sacrifice to us—still we are willing to cut the prices "EVEN DEEPER" than ever given in any sale heretofore on allwinter stocks. "You know what this means."

Remember this sale is absolute. Every item is guaranteed as advertised or money refunded.

The cut price is in plain blue pencil mark, indicating the selling price from which there will be no deviation—

NORRIS SAYS TIDE HAS TURNED

Cost of Living in the Army. Congress has been informed by the war department that there was a deficiency of $1,885,000 for the subsistence of the army during the present year, mainly because of the enhanced cost of food. The army's plight was set forth in an appeal to congress to provide more funds to feed, clothe and maintain the force, which will cost more than was estimated for the appropriation bill. The petition was accompanied by a list, prepared by the commissary general, showing increases in many staples in 1969 over 1968.

It is complained by the shippers that the Baltimore & Ohio discriminates in the freight differentials to the Great Lakes and to the east, in favor of Pennsylvania and Ohio shippers and that inadequate shipping facilities are furnished them. A committee reported that operating companies, producing 87 per cent of the tonnage of the northern district of West Virginia, served by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, had reported to it that in 1906 the road's supply of equipment was 33.6 per cent of the requirements; in 1907, 62.4 per cent of the requirements, and last year only 48.5 per cent of the requirements.
